Dear Chairman Alexander and Ranking Member Murray,

On behalf of the Nursing Community Coalition, we would like to thank you for holding the hearing titled The Healthcare Workforce: Addressing Shortages and Improving Care on May 22, 2018. Your commitment to investigating solutions that will increase the supply and decrease the demand for healthcare professionals reinforces the critical intersection that policy must address: the right care, by the right provider, at the right time. We know that a robust workforce is an essential linchpin in increasing access, reducing costs, and improving health and wellness. For this reason, our coalition’s top legislative priority in the 115th Congress is the Title VIII Nursing Workforce Reauthorization Act (S. 1109). The Title VIII Nursing Workforce Development Programs are a mainstay in the professions’ ability to provide care where it is needed most.

The demand for nurses inevitably varies by state, but the national need is projected to increase by 28% by the year 2030.¹ This demand is heightened in the 7,243 designated Primary Care Health Professional Shortage Areas and 4,243 designated Medically Underserved Areas throughout the country that impact over 84 million Americans.² The Title VIII Nursing Workforce Development Programs have been successful in both the short- and long-term as a way to not only increase the supply of nurses able to care for patients, but also increase the number of nurse educators. During the hearing, Dr. Julie Sanford, Director and Professor at the James Madison University, School of Nursing, was able to showcase the success the Title VIII programs have in meeting population care needs, particularly in those rural and underserved communities. She highlighted how these programs bring opportunities to individuals in educationally disadvantaged areas so that the focus is on building a highly-qualified nursing workforce where they live and work. In turn, this reduces the challenge of trying to recruit professionals to the area. Dr. Sanford’s personal experience with the Title VIII programs speaks to their far reaching impact and most importantly how these programs allow for her achievements to be mirrored by countless nurses across the country. Dr. Sanford aptly highlighted the fact that these programs allow for innovation to meet the changing care needs, like the opioid epidemic. Over the years, our experience as a coalition has been that the Title VIII programs’ design is appropriate to address major national concerns such as primary care shortages or helping to build an interprofessional team. Therefore, the Nursing Community Coalition agrees that S. 1109 is the right policy as it makes a few important modernizations and maintains the current structure. This legislation will allow Title VIII to continue its critical work—building the supply and distribution of qualified nurses and nurse faculty by bolstering nursing education at all levels.

The coalition looks forward to supporting the committee’s efforts on the Title VIII Nursing Workforce Reauthorization Act.
